There are a lot of museums and galleries in England, and all of them are a big part of history and culture.

I ^{have} collected data about visits to national museums and galleries in England and found out that over the years attendance ^{has} increased. Maybe it is because those particular museums and galleries add something new to draw out more people, or maybe people's interest in history and culture ^{has} increased. For example British Museum. In 2013 it had only 2,6 mln visitors, in 2015 - 3,1 mln, and in 2017 - 3,6 mln. Or maybe the "National Gallery". It had only 2,4 mln in 2013, 2,3 mln in 2015, and the 4,2 mln in 2017. (109)

To have even more visitors, I would recommend museums and galleries to add new interesting, captivating, modern features to appeal to the audience. They should do events, ^{or} other promotions. ~~For this~~ They can make free school trips to museums and galleries. I am sure, once they will attract millennials to go, their rate will go higher. In conclusion, national museums and galleries ~~will~~ attendance, and I hope it is going to keep that way, because it is important to know your history and culture.
